Maurice Dobb (Lecturer in Economics in the University of Cambridge), Soviet Economic Development Since 1917 (Routledge and Kegan Paul, London, 1948, pp. 474). * * * Mr Dobb's book is a most impressive and scholarly compilation of economic facts and statistical figures about Russia. The author draws his material from a very large number of original sources, especially from Russian economic periodicals. These are in most cases so dull and uninformative that only those whose job it is to read ...

For impressive evidence of Western participation in the early phase of Soviet economic growth, see Antony C. Sutton's Western Technology and Soviet Economic Development: 1917-1930, which argues that 'Soviet economic development for 1917-1930 was essentially dependent on Western technological aid' (p.283), and that 'at least 95 per cent of the industrial structure received this assistance ...
